

ARCH 523: Architecture & Medicine

This mostly asynchronous course looks at broad issues in health and well being from the perspective of the history and present-day workings of medical architecture building types.

The two main types of course work are:

1. Online lectures & response essays.
2. In-person meetings to develop a research project for a November mini-conference. You can work on any topic germane to health and well being for your research project (not just medical architecture). (Right: See Eva Jin's research, a web site on sustainable cohousing.)

Sustainable Cohousing Case Studies

Here you will find more information about sustainable cohousing

Eva Jin

<https://uirim0809.wixsite.com/sustainable-cohous-1>

Questions? Contact Julie Zook at jtzook@illinois.edu