School of Art + Design
University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

PRESENTED ELECTRONICALLY EACH FALL AND SPRING SEMESTER

welcome from the director

NAN GOGGIN

The School of Art + Design is reinstating a semiannual newsletter in order to better connect with our alumni and our emeritus faculty. The School has grown and changed, yet it still encompasses some of the basic values of a holistic education, one that balances emphasis on a professional major with an equally important expectation that students be versed in the humanities, literature and the social sciences. We believe in ecological sensitivity and the need to think globally, and we teach our students diverse ways of thinking that will give them the necessary perspective to help shape the world in which we live. Please keep us up to date on your lives, both personal and professional, and help us connect with as many alumni as possible by forwarding this newsletter.

emeritus faculty

TOM KOVACS

Tom Kovacs retired in 1999 after 40 years of service in the School of Art + Design as faculty member, acting assistant dean of the College of Fine and Applied Arts, program chair in the School's foundation program and finally program chair in graphic design.

Upon retirement he was hired as a visiting senior professor and consultant on design curriculum development and the planning of a computer technology facility at the University of Minnesota Duluth (UMD). Upon developing a new curriculum in graphic design Tom was appointed to a full-time teaching position, teaching in and chairing UMD's graphic design program.

In 2004 he retired again, this time receiving a beautiful m&m company watch. During the past ten years he taught graphic design and a course in visual literacy that he developed during his years as an adjunct faculty member in the School of Art + Design at the University of Illinois. He has also taught his course (now called Understanding Visual Culture) in the Chancellor's Scholars Program, (Campus Honors), the University's Osher Life Long Learning Institute (OLLI), and has delivered lectures on topics from his course in the School's design history class as well as in Urbana-Champaign's Social Science Club.

During the past ten years Tom has designed numerous posters, flyers, and playbills for the Little Village Playhouse in New York, a youth theater that has performed musical productions including Stephen Sondheim's Merrily We Roll Along and The Frogs, The Phantom Toll Booth, The Littlest Angel, Bernice Bobs Her Hair, and Sodom: the Musical, an adult satire. He has also designed advertisements and posters for University High School, where his wife Susan is assistant principal.

Tom is currently working on a series of drawings documenting nature and seasonal change in the Urbana Park District's Meadowbrook Park.

a+d alumni

Daniella Barroqueiro (EdD, art education, 2005) is an associate professor of art education at Illinois State University, Normal, IL.

Patricia Belleville (EdD, art education, 1998) was promoted in Fall 2009 to full professor of art education at Eastern Illinois University, Charleston, IL.

Celine Browning (BFA, metals, 2008) will be pursuing a MFA in metal at State University of New York in New Paltz beginning Fall 2009.

Jo Chen (EdD, art education, 1997) is vice president of National Taiwan University, Taipei, Taiwan.

Sheng Kwan Chung (EdD, art education, 2003) is assistant professor and chair of art education at the University of Houston, Houston, TX.

Karen Cummings (PhD, art education, 2007) is an assistant professor of art education, Washington University, St. Louis, MO.

Four recent alumni of the industrial design program, Ricky Biddle, Eric Larson, Ben Shao and Austin Cliffe received the 2008 International Design Excellence Award in the medical and scientific products-concepts category. Their balance sport wheelchair is designed to provide greater safety and mobility for wheelchair athletes by allowing hands-free braking and turning on the basketball court.

BEA NETTLES

Bea Nettles retired in May 2008 and has been very active in many professional endeavors since her retirement. Her activities include traveling to New Jersey in July 2008 to meet Bruce Springsteen. Bruce used Bea's artwork "Mountain Dream Tarot Deck" on Magic, a 2008 release.

She has lectured at Savannah College of Art, October 2008, exhibited books at Pyramid Atlantic Book Fair, Silver Springs, MD, in November 2008; Codex, Berkeley Campus, Oakland, CA, in February 2009; and the Hybrid Book, Philadelphia, PA, in June 2009. She was awarded the Free Library of Philadelphia's purchase prize for her offset collection at the Hybrid Book Conference. Bea recently judged the SABA Book Arts Exhibition and gave a lecture at the University of South Carolina, Columbia, SC.

She will be teaching book arts for the University of Georgia this fall in Cortona, Italy.

CLYDE DAVIS

Clyde Davis is an alumnus of the School of Art + Design and co-founder of and former Executive Creative Director and President of Cline, Davis + Mann, Inc., in New York, a pharmaceutical advertising agency. His clients included Bristol-Myers-Squibb Company, Parke-Davis and Pfizer Pharmaceuticals. Mr. Davis was elected into the Medical Advertising Hall of Fame in New York City in 2005. He was honored as a contributor who made a positive difference to the intellectual growth and prosperity of the health care communications industry.

For the last eight years Clyde Davis has awarded a scholarship to an incoming freshman in the School of Art + Design from the greater Chicago area. He has generously supported these students with full funding for four years. This scholarship enables the recipient to follow their passion.

Each year the Davises also provide support to several Art + Design students for study abroad. As tuition and travel costs have increased, so has the Davises' generosity.

Their gifts are the largest student-directed awards in the College of Fine and Applied Arts.

Katrina Kruszewski, the first Clyde Davis Scholar, is now living and working in New York as an interior designer for a small company called NEMA Workshop. She assists in the design of both commercial and residential spaces and is currently working on a spa in midtown Manhattan, a steakhouse in New Jersey, and a couple of lofts downtown. She has big dreams of one day opening her own firm where interior design and art join to form a powerful combination. Although these plans await an economic recovery, Katrina said, "I am still tremendously grateful for his extremely generous scholarship. It provided me with an amazing education that has been the foundation for everything I do. I learned how to think at U of I and that, I have found, is a priceless skill."

UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS

In May 2009, the School celebrated our 5th annual BFA Graduate Exhibition at the Krannert art Museum. This graduation exhibition displayed a broad range of art and design practices, which illustrated new and established technologies in material and virtual realms by 122 BFAs.

Emily Breyer (BFA candidate, metals, 2010) and Ana Cherry (BFA candidate, metals, 2010) received student scholarships from the Society of North American Goldsmiths to attend the national conference in Philadelphia, PA, in May 2009.

David Choi (BFA, metal, 2009) will be pursuing a MFA in metal from the State University of New York at New Paltz, beginning Fall 2009.

Stephen Diebold (BFA candidate, industrial design, 2010) has a patent pending on a pointer design for quadriplegia. His invention recently won a $27,000 grand prize in the 2009 Collegiate Inventors Competition. He also had work selected for the design exhibition “25 years of design and love” by Accademia Italiana in Florence, Italy.

Soo Kang Lee (BFA, industrial design 2009) was one of three students from the United States whose work was selected for the inaugural “LG surfaces beyond student design challenge.” In April 2009 she presented her finished concepts in Milan, Italy, with other student winners from Europe and Asia.

Darren McPherson (BFA, graphic design, 2009) was an honorable mention for the 2009 AIGA student enrichment scholarship award.

Adam Muran (BFA, graphic design, 2009) was the recipient of the 2009 AIGA student enrichment scholarship and was awarded $3,000. This award is given to a graduating senior in the state of Illinois demonstrating particular promise in transitioning into the professional work force.

Brittany Pyle (BFA candidate, photography, 2010) received an Illinois General Assembly Scholarship for the 2009–2010 academic year.

Chang-Ting (Tim) Tsai (BFA candidate, industrial design) had jewelry work selected by the Charon Kransen gallery for SOFA West, Santa Fe, June 2009.

FACULTY

William Bullock coordinated the e-waste collection on February 21 in which five tons of electronic waste—computers, CPUs, monitors, keyboards, printers, mice, scanners and cell phones were donated to support the Sustainable E-Waste Student Design Competition. More than 20 student teams competed in the competition on April 16 for scholarship awards. The proposals were judged by corporate and government judges, and the contest was covered by the Champaign-Urbana News-Gazette and featured on the Microsoft website.

Elizabeth Delacruz received the 2009 June King McFee Award at this year's National Art Education Association convention. This award honors an individual who has brought distinction to the field of art education through an exceptional and continuous record of achievement in scholarly writing, research, professional leadership, teaching or community service. Elizabeth also received the National Art Education Association (NAEA) Higher Education Division, Art Educator of the Year Award and the 2009 FAA Faculty Excellence in Teaching Award.

Jonathan Fineberg coordinated the Illinois at the Phillips spring 2009 symposium, "Teaching Painting," in March. This symposium included Fang Lijun, Tim Griffin, Jacqueline Humphries and Hamza Walker. The symposium addressed issues such as how varied are contemporary practices and how the art pedagogy that subtends them has changed; how the ways we teach painting transform the nature of painting as well as the ways we see, teach and write about it; and the role of criticism in teaching painting as well as different international teaching practices and the ways in which regional practices share common ground.

Ryan Griffis' work, "The Temporary Travel Office" was included in the book and exhibition, "Experimental Geography: Radical Approaches to Landscape, Cartography, and Urbanism," published by ICI (Independent Curators International) and Melville House. Ryan was the recipient of the 2009 FAA Faculty Excellence in Research Award.

Joel Ross had a solo exhibition titled “ROADSIDE: A Presentation of Recent Field Experiments and Prototypes,” at the Monique Meloche Gallery, Chicago, May 2009. The exhibition was held in conjunction with Art Chicago.

Deke Weaver’s project, “The Unreliable Bestiary,” is one of 42 projects selected from 2100 international applicants by Creative Capital, New York, 2009. The three-year relationship with Creative Capital includes financial, administrative and mentoring support and a $35,000 grant.

David Weightman has been part of the faculty advising team for the Solar Decathlon 2009 project for the last two years. The U of I entry, Gable House, recently placed second in this international competition, which is sponsored by the U.S. Department of Energy and involves invited teams from 20 universities from the U.S. and elsewhere, in the design and construction of a solar-powered house. After construction the houses were shipped to Washington, D.C., and installed on the National Mall for testing and public viewing. The Illinois house has been designed to German Passivhaus insulation standards and with its R70 walls and roof will need little heating, even in the depths of a Midwestern winter. It was built by Homeway Homes of Goodfield and has involved substantial donations and sponsorship from Kohler, Optiwin, Lamboo, Crate and Barrel, Valcuccine, Forbo, Herman Miller and many others. Over 100 students have been involved over the last two years in various classes in architecture, engineering and industrial design, under the guidance of Mark Taylor from Architecture and Pat Chapman from Engineering. The house is projected to return to a permanent location near the campus after the competition.

He is also part of a National Association of Schools of Art and Design working group on the future of design education in the U.S., as well as participating in four workshops for the National Science Foundation on the future of graduate design education in engineering. He is also the external monitor for the masters by project program at Unitec in Auckland, New Zealand, as well as being external examiner for the industrial design program at the National University of Singapore.

BRENDA NARDI

Associate Director of Development

One of my major goals as Associate Director of Development for the School of Art + Design is to meet and/or talk with as many alumni as possible. In my opinion, in order to really understand and appreciate the inner workings of the School, and in turn, go out and find support for it, I must make an effort to see how things have shaken out for the many students who have come and gone over the years.

To date I have met Art + Design grads from as far back as 1948, including one gentleman in the first class to graduate with an MFA in 1950. I've visited working artists with degrees from the University of Illinois who are now living and working all over the country. I've been to San Francisco, Chicago, Cleveland, and New York and various points in between. I've visited with studio artists, graphic designers, industrial designers, art educators, and art historians. I have been treated to wonderful stories and memories and have heard many different versions of similar experiences. What I hear leads me to believe the more things change, the more they stay the same. Graduates of the School of Art + Design at the University of Illinois feel they were well served by the School and want to stay connected or reconnect in meaningful ways.

I meet people who are passionate about what they are doing, people who understand and personify the meaning of perseverance; successful people who are doing what they love. Some are even fortunate enough to make a living doing it! Whatever the case, the field, the process, one common thread repeats itself time and time again. The School of Art + Design at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign produces satisfied, stimulated, and successful art professionals.
